

Question Wording and Coding

Below we provide details on the 205 survey questions from the forty-three surveys used in the analysis. Four firms (Princeton Survey Research Associates [PSRA], International Communication Research [ICR], NBC/Wall Street Journal, or Gallup) conducted all of the nationally representative surveys and the data files are archived in the Roper Center for Public Opinion Research.

Each entry below contains the survey in temporal order, the dates of the survey field period, and the number of respondents. The question wording, including the common introduction appears next. Surveys with multiple items were read in a random fashion to offset concerns about question order effects. The partisanship and implications coding appears last (e.g., Democratic/Positive; Democratic/Negative; Democratic/None; Republican/Positive, Republican/Negative, Republican/None, None/None). Note: the survey numbers do not match those in the replication file.
